Accessing congressional buildings through underground tunnels...

House Office Building:

- There are signs to each building in these areas with an arrow pointing in the correct direction.
- The north wing of CANNON (Floors B thru 5) is closed.
- CANNON to LONGWORTH: go to the basement level, there are two tunnels; one at the northwest corner (go into the rotunda and veer left past the show shine station), and another at the southwest corner.
- LONGWORTH to CANNON: go to the basement level, there is a tunnel at the northwest corner. The tunnel at the southwest corner is closed.
- LONGWORTH to RAYBURN: go to the basement level, there are two tunnels with escalators going down to Rayburn at the southwest and northwest corners.
- RAYBURN to LONGWORTH: go to the subbasement level at the northeast corner with an escalator up to Longworth; there is also a tunnel on the G3 level at the southwest corner with an escalator up to Longworth.

Senate Office Buildings:

- The HART and DIRKSEN buildings are connected on every floor from the first level to the sixth level. There are corridors connecting the buildings from the northeast and southeast corners of DIRKSEN to the northwest and southwest corners of HART. There are stairs between the buildings (look for signs that will direct you up or down towards the appropriate floor. Do not try to connect through the basement. It is a maze and difficult to follow signs.)
- RUSSELL to DIRKSEN: go to the basement level, there are two tunnels; one at the northeast and southeast corners of Russell
- DIRKSEN to RUSSELL: go to the basement level, there are two tunnels; one at the northwest and southwest corners of Dirksen.

NOTE: If you are having trouble navigating through the tunnels or finding a tunnel, look for signs, ask a Capitol Police Officer, or just ask the staff at your current meeting how to get to your next office.
